A Verse For This Week

Men seldom think deeply on subjects in which they have no choice of opinion; they are fearful of encountering obstacles to their faith—as in religion—and so are content with the surface.—Sheridan.

My Community-- Today and Tomorrow

Recently the Georgia Power Company announced a contest open to high school students. Men have been made to collect money and aids will be given to the writers of the best essays on "My Community—Today and Tomorrow." Last week we published the essay written by Miss Betty Ann Sherman, the runner-up in the girls' division. The high school here the essay by Dan Blitch, the runner-up in the boys' division. As soon as we may, we will announce the winners in both divisions and publish their essays. We are publishing these essays because they indicate how our young people are thinking, and we believe that the way they think is very important to Statesboro and Bulloch County—for the way they are thinking today is the way they go tomorrow.

(By Dan Blitch)
Statesboro, the county seat of Bulloch County, is located in one of the best agricultural and livestock regions of the state. Bulloch is one of the richest farming sections in the state. Statesboro is the center of a large tobacco growing area and its markets led the state in the number of pounds of tobacco sold during 1946. It is also a big market for peanuts, which is one of the principal crops in Bulloch. Bulloch's chief products are cattle, hogs, peanuts, tobacco, cotton, grain and corn. Bulloch's climate is very mild and permits the growing of a great variety of crops. The prosperity of Statesboro depends largely upon the income from Bulloch county farms.

My community needs, most of all, a recreational center for high school youth. I think this is very essential to a community and I think mine will have one in the future. We have recently organized a teen-age tavern where we can dance and play games every Saturday night.

Statesboro has a fine educational system but we are in great need of two improvements. We need new school buildings and the teachers should be paid more. I think all communities are in need of raising the salaries of the teachers. I think our communities should do all they can to promote this idea and I'm sure our state will increase the amount to be paid the teachers. Statesboro is the home of the Georgia Teachers College and we are proud of this educational institution. We have the best white and colored schools with eleven grades and we are installing the twelve grade system next year.

My community, in its appearance, is very pleasing. In my opinion, but many improvements could be made. In the last ten years I think my community has improved greatly in its appearance. Many homes have been painted and remodeled. Our streets are regularly swept and cleaned.

Will We Ever Learn?

Will we ever learn? The answer seems to be: "Never."

And because we will never learn it cost us $4,000,000 during the past four months.

A recent survey by the State Forestry Department reveals that forest fires in the state since November of last year have damaged our timber resources to the extent of more than $4,000,000. 500,000 acres have been burned over and because of the dry winter and the winds the damage was great. The Forestry Department believes that fully 85 per cent of the woods losses were preventable. Many of the fires were set by landowners to burn off pastures and the fire "gotting away from them."

It will take the forests burned last year until 1955 to recover. But we will never learn.

This fall and winter we'll do the same thing: we'll burn off our pastures, and the fire will "get away from us" and the damage to young trees and to the floor of our timber resources is irreparable. Bulloch County is no exception to this annual waste of our forest. Educational programs seem to be without results, for year after year there is always the figures which show that we will never learn. A forest fire protective

... But Don't Blame Us If the Almanac Is Wrong!

PATROL CRAFT 777
She has no tiny Jap flags, nor tiny red planes, nor tiny red ships painted on the side of her wheelhouse, publishing her combat missions and war record. And the mounts for her 20-millimeter guns are empty and the gun in her bow is covered with canvas and her "ash-can" racks are bare.

But PC 777 had a part in World War II just as important as seeking out and destroying Jap barges, shipping and planes. For, you see, Patrol Craft 777, is a training ship and was a training ship during the war. She is now seeing duty at Savannah as a training ship for the organized reserves of the U. S. Navy.

SPAM SANDWICHES
At noon we had sandwiches—SPAM SANDWICHES—and then we knew the Skipper was serious about this training business, for we might just as well have been at real war—SPAM SANDWICHES—when we were with the Skipper and the crew of PC 777.

Last Sunday she made her third cruise out to sea carrying a crew of 54 with 12 officers and 21 guests. We made the trip, together with Sam Straus, and Lehman Franklin, as guests of Commander Paul E. Graham, Sixth Naval District Representative for the Reserve in Savannah.

NAVY COFFEE IS GOOD

We went aboard the ship at 7:45 and were greeted by the Commander and Lieutenant Commander David Morrison, skipper of the ship and battalion commander of the Organized Reserve in Savannah. We were made comfortable and immediately sought out the galley for a cup of coffee—for there is one thing for which the Navy is famous—its coffee. We had left Statesboro in the early morning hours without that necessary day-breaker. PC 777's coffee was in the true Navy tradition—good.

The PC 777 slipped out of her berth and out into the yellow Savannah River. Her crew was busy with making her ready for sea and her guests at the rails, impressed with the idea of going to sea in a "war-ship."

We eased along by the Southeastern Shipyards, now deserted and ghostlike, with the hulks of three ships rusting and breaking up, tied at the docks. Picking up speed, we slipped by Cockspar Island, Tybee Light and were at sea.

You always know when you are at sea—you just know, for there is no other feeling like it.

PC 777 TOOK IT EASY

PC 777 took it like a lady—easy, with her prow high and her wake-spray frothy and white.

It was after we were at sea that we became aware of the purpose of the cruise. The "salts"—the men who had seen action in the Pacific, aboard LST's, DE's, "cans", cruisers, carriers, with months between them and their last action—back into the swing, getting the feel of a ship again, back on duty.

"Fire" broke out when we were well out to sea and the crew members snapped-to and had the fire out and secured before we realized that it was just a fire drill.

Later, a "man overboard" drill kept the crew on the alert, not knowing just when another "drill" would be called.

Members of the Organized Reserve took turns at the wheel. The "watch" changed, new conditions were set, all simulating a condition of war.

Good Books Are True Friends

In the best books great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours.—Channing.

By Mrs. F. F. Baker

"RED MORNING"—By Ruby Frey.
This is a sensational first novel, dealing with the period of the French and Indian War, the story taking place in Pennsylvania.

Jane, the leading character, with her sick husband and a group of prospective settlers, are waiting at an outpost for the professional guide to lead them to the Western Lands in Ohio. Her husband dies. Jane doesn't want to go back East and looks around for another husband. Her choice is John Frazier, a fur trader, who has a cabin on Turtle Creek. To get to the cabin and settle down becomes an obsession with Jane. Her intense jealousy of Dorkey, a "bound-girl", to whom John has paid some attention, is also an important factor in the story. With a group of pioneers, they accompany Gen. Braddock's army on his march to the West. In the horrible Indian massacre which follows, Braddock is killed as well as most of the settlers.

Forced to return to Fort Cumberland, John builds a cabin on Evtitt's Creek, a few miles away. Jane rides out from the Fort one day, and is captured by Indians. They take her to their village many miles away, and on the long and arduous trip, Jane loses her unborn child. She is forced into an Indian marriage with Pesquimotom a chief, in order to save her life. After three months, she escapes and makes her way back, only to find that John has given her up as dead, and has married and is captured by Indians.

On a visit to Bombay, Mrs. Wermer met a girl who resembled Mary Ann so much it was startling. A marriage was arranged between the girl, Mary Ann, and Rashid, and was celebrated in old Moslem style, the ceremony last.

Everything is straightened out satisfactorily in the end, with John and Jane preparing at last to start over again at Turtle Creek.

A great many of the characters in this book are taken from life—John Frazier, Jane, Christopher Gist, and Jane's Indian husband, Pesquimotom, were real people. The Turtle Creek cabin was located outside of what is now Braddock, Pa., and the Fort Duquesne described is now Pittsburgh.

The most outstanding non-fiction book in months is "MY INDIAN FAMILY"—By Hilda Wermer.

Mrs. Wermer's daughter, Mary Ann, an Indian-Moslem, Rashid Ali. He was well educated (in England) and to all appearances modern in his ideas concerning "purdah" (the segregation of women) and other practices in India, but when faced with cerness and the PC 777 too on the feeling of a ship returning to her berth, a job well done. A few minutes before five o'clock found the ship and battalion commander of the Organized Reserve in Savannah, and her dockings with the wives, friends, and sweethearts of the several leaves of fresh bread and crew waving welcome from the docks.

We came ashore and as we shook hands with the Commander and Skipper we knew that the Navy's Organized Reserve is doing and going to do a good job—of that keeping its own ready and smoothed out to pond-like quiet.

ing three days and costing a fortune.

This book tells more about Indian life, customs and religions than any I ever read before. It explains a good deal about the Hindu caste system that is hard for us to understand. Mrs. Wermer and her daughter were regarded as "untouchables" by the Brahmins, and even though they were the best of friends, the Brahmins could not touch anything the Wermers had handled without breaking caste. It created delicate situations at times but the fact that the friendships proved the intelligence and understanding of the author and her daughter.

"THE STARDUST ROAD"—By Hoagy Carmichael.
Remember when you were a "flapper" back in the early 20's?—(if you were a boy you were a "shiek") and went slightly crazy over the new "jazz hands"? Short skirts were just coming in, and the events that led to the creation of the classic "Stardust" plus "Lazybones" and "Rockin' Chair" and it is a perfectly wonderful job of writing. Hoagy's genius isn't all musical.

The Mystery of the Week is "MY LATE WIVES"—By Carter Dickson. This is a fine example of that rare phenomena—the truly humorous detective story. One scene, which takes place in a party arcade, left me slightly hysterical, but the humor never intrudes upon the more serious business of detection. The sleuth is that grand old man, Sir Henry Merrivale—need I say more?

The Temperance League is trying to petition the Ordinance to call an election in Bulloch County to do away with the legalized, controlled sale of whiskey.

BE SURE TO CONSIDER THE EFFECT OF YOUR
SIGNING SUCH A CARD OR PETITION.

Do you realize that the State of Georgia is receiving approximately $20,000,000 a year from taxes and licenses for the sale of alcoholic beverages and liquors?

That Bulloch County and the City of Statesboro combined are receiving about $75,000 annually from the same source?

That voting dry means a wet county, without lawful control; and no taxes from the sale of whiskey?

That voting dry means an increase in your taxes, which must be paid by you?

That it takes taxes in order to run schools, pay teachers, maintain hospitals and to pay other public expenses: And that the cry now is for more and more money for such purposes?

That to vote dry will call for a big force of County Police to enforce a farcical dry law?

That you will be taxed more and more to help carry this extra burden?

That it is better for the morale of the people to patronize a lawful enterprise than it is to patronize an unlawful one?

City Provides Free Parking

The City of Statesboro has secured the use of a vacant lot to be used as parking space for the automobile owners of Statesboro. Mayor Gilbert Cone announced this week that the city has arranged with Mr. Roger Holland for the use of the vacant lot back of the Callahan Pharmacy for parking space. He stated that the city is clearing the space which will park 240 cars. He hopes that business people in the city will use it so that the parking spaces on the main streets in the business section of the city will be made available to city shoppers and visitors from the county and other sections of the county.

This lot will give Statesboro two large free parking spaces. The other one is between the city office and the North Hotel.

He also stated that the parking meters are on order.

VETERANS CORNER

Full information on how veterans can take advantage of the chance to reinstate their lapsed National Service Life Insurance is now available at the Veterans Administration Contact Office at Statesboro, Jack I. Biles, VA Contact Representative, reported today.

New legislation just passed by Congress gives veterans until August 1 to reinstate their war-time policies without a physical examination or red tape. Low-cost NSLI policies have long been described by insurance experts as the greatest amount of protection at the most liberal terms at the lowest cost.

For the next several months, veterans may reinstate their NSLI term policies simply by paying two monthly premiums and filling out a reinstatement form.

The Contact Representative at the Statesboro office will assist veterans in filling out the form. The office is located at 22 1/2 East Main Street.

The form may also be obtained by writing directly to the Insurance Service, Veterans Administration Branch 5, Atlanta 3, Georgia.

PULPWOOD

Rings Mr. Hartman's Register

"Anything that stirs up and increases trade is good... pulp and papermaking does just that," according to C. C. Hartman who runs a store at Jesup, Georgia.

"Fifty extra dollars received for pine trees harvested from a previously idle woodlot represent hundreds of dollars in trade when they have passed around and finally been rung up on my cash register and those of other merchants in Jesup."

"Extra dollars from extra pulpwood, which almost any farm can grow, are like the cup of water you put in the pump to make it produce gallons."

Because of the steady market for pulpwood, it is a valuable builder of trade for general business in the Southeast. But, without the kraft paper industry to buy it, pulpwood could prime no trade pumps... increase no farm incomes.

Pulp and paper mills have helped fill out the economy of the Southeast... they have provided the source of that extra income which makes a profit margin for many farmers and their home towns.

IRRIGATION TEST

A sprinkler irrigation project near Alamo, Georgia, is demonstrating how low-pressure, revolving sprinklers can be satisfactorily operated from the natural pressure of water from artesian wells. This development points the way to better use of artesian water from flowing wells, most of which is now being wasted, and may encourage drilling wells in artesian areas for irrigation purposes, according to Everett H. Davis, irrigation specialist of the State Extension Service.

Tobacco Problems

Georgia tobacco farmers, who are already having trouble raising plants because of cold weather and blue mold attacks, were warned this week against still another obstacle they may face in growing their 1947 crops. E. C. Westcott, State Extension tobacco specialist, said indications are that the supply of arsenate of lead for control of tobacco insects will be very short. The tobacco specialist urged farmers to obtain arsenate of lead whenever and wherever they have the opportunity.

FOOD FREEZING WORK

A large percentage of the frozen food retained in Georgia stores is grown outside the State at present, according to D. N. Harrell, State Extension engineer. He said this week that some freezing locker plants over the State contemplate buying quantities of fruits and vegetables for packaging and freezing in 1947. In Harrell's opinion, there is an opportunity for a few farmers to contract with these locker operators to grow the products for freezing.

HAM AND EGG SHOW

Starting from an exhibit of 15 or 20 small hams and a few dozen dirty eggs 32 years ago, the annual Negro Ham and Egg Show at Fort Valley, Georgia, has become nationally famous. The thirty-second annual show, which is being held this week (March 6 and 7), is featuring 660 hams, 200 shoulders and 200 pieces of breakfast bacon. In addition, 250 dozen selected eggs and 12 pens of purchased chickens have been included in this 1947 show. The show was originated by O. S. O'Neal, Negro county agent in Peach county, and has been under his supervision every year.

ALL'S FAIR

ATTRACTIVE VISITORS. Many of us recall Mary Small, who was Art Instructor at GTC about nine years ago. Mary was the guest during the week end of Betty McLemore and we know they were not hard-pressed for conversation for they served together in the WAVES for 31 months, their service beginning while Betty was stationed in New Orleans. Mary has more recently served as manager of the Midway Inn and Museum. This snappy career woman was seen wearing a smart black and white jacket with flaring peplum in the back, a black skirt and small black belt style hat. Betty wore a graceful aqua gabardine model. And for good measure Betty had the opportunity to exchange notes with another attractive visitor, Mrs. Elliott Hall, who with her husband, came down from Greensboro, N. C., with Bobby McLemore for the week end. Mrs. Hall, a typical English girl, served for four years with the British Air Force. Another visitor described as typically English is Mrs. W. A. Woods of Chicago, who is the guest of Everett and Mary Agnes Williams. Mrs. Woods' husband is a captain in the Merchant Marine and was Everett's C. O. while he served in the Merchant Marine. Mrs. Woods is accompanied by an aristocratic looking building — you know gossip is one thing leads to another. The Everett Williams are moving in with Jane Cone temporarily. They have bought Frank and Cora Williams' lovely home on Savannah Avenue about a mile West of Statesboro. The old home site is located atop a hill surrounded by pines and overlooks a limpid pond—Already in the hands of the Williams, it is in for something superlative—as somebody remarked, Cora will plant flowers all the way to town. However, Cora insists that she is going to quit working so hard with her flowers. I am still remembering a gorgeous basket of roses Cora brought me with the dew still on them. It took every bowl and vase I had to put them in. And speaking of moves leads me to remark that the McCormick Gift Shop now located in the Rushing Hotel is moving up to the shop next to Bill Bover's Furniture Store. Henry McCormick's sister, Mrs. Hodges, who is associated with him in the gift shop is, to quote, "lovely and charming."

AND WHILE I am snooping around, you may as well go with me to a cheery, livable two-room apartment where a flair for decorating is very evident. Annie Laurie (Mrs. Brooks), Simmons, who made her home at the Brooks House, was on the spot when Laurie Simmons converted this Statesboro landmark into a modern apartment building. "Miss Annie" selected one suitable to her needs and she has done a swell job in making two rooms and a bath look like any woman's dream home. Her bed-living room is colorful, with a light green rug, a Hollywood bed covered with rose-figured chintz. The same gay pattern is repeated in the draw curtains. A Sheraton dressing table, a small drop-leaf table, which serving as an end table, is easily converted into a dining table when guests appear, a tiered table with interesting porcelain and china figurines, a really good picture over the mantel, flanked by lovely silver candlesticks, all combine to make peared recently in an Atlanta paper: "Wanted to Rent: Ex-Navy Lieutenant and an ex-wave can't be supremely happy without suitable quarters, furnished or unfurnished. Will lease everything immediately and hold for the momentous occasion. JA 6340 days DE 8869 evenings. Remington or Perry, or B. C. 106, Journal."

The Remington in above is "Sara," the Perry is "Oreighton." Our information is that this clever plea paid off beautifully.

AS IKE MINIKOVITZ was really an event this year—the tea, the dramatic production and luncheon were pleasant highlights—while the discussions on the theme, "The Club Woman in Her Community," presented much food for thought. Out of which we hope to derive lasting benefit. The quarters were promptly offered and Sara is busy getting it shipshape and in readiness for the momentous occasion...

FOR THOSE OF YOU who are desperately hunting an apartment and as yet your efforts have been in vain, let me cite you to a method that might help you. At least, it worked in Atlanta. Could be it would work here. This ad ap-

Sam Abernathy Holds the Line!

Folks in our town have been making mighty commotion recently about Sam Abernathy. In spite of talk about inflation, Sam's prices—(say, on eggs for instance)—are what they were a year ago.

"Shucks," says Sam, "Don't give me credit. I get my eggs from Slim Hines' dairy farm. Slim hasn't raised his whole sale prices, because Bert Childers has kept his price the same on chicken feed. It works by mutual agreement!"

And there again you have Self-Regulation, doing what no law could ever do. Like Self-Regulation in the Brewing Industry... Brewers and tavern keepers get together by mutual agreement to maintain decent, law-abiding standards among places that sell beer.

From where I sit, the more you leave things up to the people themselves, the more you get the kind of results America is famous for. —co-operation by mutual agreement. Or, if you want another name for it, self-regulation!

When seeds are sown, the sower should have a definite idea about how long each kind should take to come up. This cannot be told to the hour, or even the day. But among flower seeds, for example, different kinds may vary in germination time from 5 to 10 days for marigolds, to 180 days for aconite, or a full year for clematis. So many a supposed failure with flower seeds is due to lack of information on this important point. Seeds may be sown, and when they fail to appear in a week or two, be given up for lost; when all that was required for success was another few days, weeks or months of waiting. Patience is a requisite for gardening; plants cannot be hurried; they have their established speed of growth, and the gardener who succeeds must learn them. The germination period is affected not only by the habit of the plant, but also by conditions of soil, temperature and moisture. There will be some difference between indoors and outdoors. Some seeds grow most quickly in cool soil and some require warmth. These preferences are usually stated in catalogues.
